

The McDuffie Center for Strings functions as a big 26-person family where we all support and learn from each other. The Center also has a thorough and personal investment in each student, far more than any other school I know of. These elements, combined with access to the most sought after faculty members in the country, create a learning environment that easily rivals the best schools in the country and the world, but without a price tag.